FOR SMALLER JURIES.

In the constitutional convention on Wedocsday during the debate on the question of reducing the number of jurors in unimportant cases Mr. R. Walton Moore, of Fairfax county, said:

"And very many others may be tried with a small jury, and expenses saved. That is, I repeat, what they did in Louisians in the constitution of the State of Louisians adopted in 1894, and when you go to the constitution of the State of Louisians adopted in 1895, you find what? You find that they were so well satisfied with the experiment of 1884 that they not only retained the provision for the reduction of the number of jurors in misdemeanor cases, but they extended it.

which we are endeavoring to make in the framing of the constitution?

Now, it is a practical matter. It involves a large saving to the Commonwealth. No one, in my humble judgment, can say that the slightest inherent right of any citizen will be taken away if you allow the body which represents the citizens of this Commonwealth to declare in its judgment that certain misdemeanors may be tried by less than twelve men.
